

How to boost your children's /teen's ORACY SKILLS!

Here are some suggestions to stimulate your children's oracy skills:

1.FAMILY DISCUSSIONS

- Set aside regular times for family discussions where everyone can share their thoughts and ideas.
- Encourage active listening and respectful communication.
- Discuss current events, interesting topics, or even plan family outings together.
- This practice helps children develop their ability to express themselves clearly and engage in meaningful conversations.

2.STORYTELLING SESSIONS

- Arrange storytelling sessions where you and your children take turns sharing stories.
- These can be fictional tales, personal experiences, or even improvised narratives.
- Encourage creativity, use expressive language, and emphasise the importance of effective storytelling techniques like tone, gestures, and vocal variety.

3.DEBATES AND PRESENTATIONS

- Organise mini-debates or presentations at home on fun and engaging topics.
- Assign roles and allow your children to research, gather information, and present their arguments or ideas.
- This activity enhances their research skills, critical thinking, and public speaking abilities.

4.ROLE-PLAYING AND DRAMATIC PLAY

- Encourage your children to engage in role-playing activities.
- Provide them with props, costumes, and scenarios to act out.
- This helps them develop their imagination, express emotions, and practice clear communication while assuming different roles.

5.PODCASTS AND INTERVIEWS

- Encourage your children to create their own podcasts or conduct interviews.
- They can choose topics of interest, prepare questions, and record conversations with family members or friends.
- This activity improves their interviewing skills, active listening, and articulation

6.PUBLIC SPEAKING OPPORTUNITIES

- Look for local events or community programs that offer public speaking opportunities for children.
- Encourage your little ones to participate in storytelling contests, recitation events, or even community presentations.
- Public speaking experiences provide a platform for them to refine their oracy skills and build confidence.
- Remember, creating a supportive and encouraging environment is essential for nurturing oracy skills.
- Celebrate their progress, provide constructive feedback, and be patient throughout the journey.
